

Can't pretend anymore

Music & lyrics: Kim Walker

Male only Female only Both

This was going to be a love song, to celebrate the years.
Just another little love song, to kiss away all those tears.
Now you've dreamed a whole new vision, it's a future without me.
The torment and pain in your soul laid bare when you made that emotional plea. You said ...

I can't pretend to love you anymore.
I can't pretend to love you anymore.
Don't have the will to fight, please sleep somewhere else tonight.
If you respect me, then set me free.
Honesty won't let me just ignore,
(You said) I can't pretend to love you anymore.

Well this should've been a love song, about us as lovers, parents, friends.
Every note a happy memory, and a chorus that never ends.
Now sadness flows from your pen while my heart spills on the page,
It took time and courage to find the truth and the words that I finally said.

I can't pretend to love you anymore.
I can't pretend to love you anymore.
Don't have the will to fight, please sleep somewhere else tonight.
If you respect me, then set me free.
Honesty won't let me just ignore,
I can't pretend to love you anymore.

This was going to be a love song, a chance to make amends.
Now it's a different kind of love song, we didn't make it to the end.
There's no need to say goodbye, I don't plan, to disappear,
Our love together won't be erased or those words that still burn in my ears.

Finale:

I can't pretend to love you anymore. (I didn't know you were pretending to love me)
I can't pretend to love you anymore. (Hard to believe your love has gone)
Don't have the will to fight please/I'll sleep somewhere else tonight (You'll be alone)
If you respect me then set me free/(I respect and set you free)
Can't give what I don't have/(I tried to make things right you couldn't change)
Wanna make my own life/(I'll move on with my life and start anew)
Honesty won't let me just ignore/(Maybe soon I'll admit)
I can't pretend to love you anymore.
